Not illustrated. 1848 Excerpt: . . . in letters of gold, An Appeal to Heaven; and on the other, the armorial bearings of Connecticut--consisting of three vines, without supporters or crest, with the motto Qui transtulit, sustinet; a beautiful allusion to the confidence our pilgrim fathers placed in the protecting care of providence, and to the three allegorical scions, Knowledge, Liberty, and Religion, which they had transplanted to America. An animated, pathetic, and highly patriotic address to the army, was then made by the Rev. Mr. Leonard, Chaplain to General Putnam's division, followed by prayer. The whole, says an eye-witness, was conducted with the utmost decency, good order and regularity, and to the universal acceptance of all present. And the Philistines on Bunker's Hill heard the shout of the Israelites, and being very fearful, paraded themselves in battle array. f As evidence of the cheerful spirit and good humor, which prevailed at this time among the defenders of liberty, and a specimen of the manner in which Putnam encouraged his men, by endeavoring to make their toil a recreation, the following anecdote, related by the venerable Captain Foster, of Danvers, is given. Captain Foster belonged to Colonel Mansfield's regiment, which was sta He who transplanted will support them, t Am.
