CHAPTER XVII RUNES OF THE SOBBOW OF WOMEN Green Fire During the most active years of the Fiona Maeleod writings, the author was usually in a highly wrought condition of mental and emotional tension, which produced great restlessness, so that he could not long remain contentedly anywhere. We spent the summer of 1896 moving about from one place to another that had special interest for him. First we went to Bamborough, for seabathing (he was a fine swimmer), and to visit the little Holy Isle of the Eastern Shores, Lindisfarne, Ionas daughter. Thence to the Clyde to be near his mother and sisters. From Inverness we went to the Falls of Lora, in Ossians country, and later we moved to one of Williams favourite haunts, Loch Tarbert, off Loch Fyne, where our friends Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rinder had taken a house for the...
