The character of complete revelator ascribed here to Jesus is explained by His intimate and personal relation with God Himself, such as is described in the following words: who is in the bosom of the Father. The participle $\epsilon\upsilon\omega$, who is, is connected in a very close logical relation with the following verb: He has revealed. As Baumlein says, it is equivalent to $\epsilon\iota\sigma\tau\iota$, inasmuch as He is; thereupon rests His competency to reveal. --The figure which John employs might be derived from the position of two. nearest guests at a banquet (xiii. 23); but it seems rather to be borrowed from the position of a son seated on his father's knees and resting on his bosom. It is the emblem of a complete opening of the heart; he who occupies this place in relation to God must know the most secret thoughts of the Father and His inmost will. The word $\kappa\omicron\upsilon\omicron\varsigma$, bosom, would by itself prove that the mystery of the Son's existence is a matter, not of metaphysics, but of love, comp. xvii. 24: Thou didst love me before the foundation of the world. The omission of the words $\epsilon\upsilon\omega$ in K is a negligence condemned by all the other MSS. Must we, with Hofmann, Luthardt and Weiss, refer the words: who is in the bosom of the Father to the present glorified condition of Jesus? But the heavenly state which Jesus now enjoys cannot explain how He...
