Excerpt: . . . and that the more weak and ignorant part embrace religion. This is pretty true, viz. ; their reason makes them deists. And why . There are certain ideas which must be taken through certain mediums, in order to have a right and just conce tion of them, and otherwise, would cause a person to run into absurdities. For instance: liheard of a blind man, who hearing persons talk about colors, informed them that he thou ht he could describe what the color of red was like, viz. , the sound Qfa trumpet. This absurdity, that red was like the sound of a trumpet, ori nated by attem ting to catch the idea through the medium of the ear. Equally absurd wou d be the idea 0 sounds, if taken through the medium of the eye, which only can be taken through the medium of the ear. So these deists attempt to conceive just and accurate ideas of revealed religion by natural reason, which leads them into an absurdity, and causes them to conclude that it is imagination, deception, or hypocrisy, in those who pretend to it: whereas, if they would conceive of it through a different channel or medium, viz. , the inward sensations or convictions of the mind, and c. --if they would give due attention to the same, as sincere inquirers after truth, the would feel the Spirit of Truth bearing witness to, or of the truth, to convince and correct,...
