I Have been requested to address you this forenoon on the Life of the Blessed Joan of Arc, whose statue was blessed on Wednesday last by His Grace The Archbishop of Westminster. But you will permit me first of all to express my earnest thanks to the Committee who organized this presentation, and to all those who co-operated with them. Their generosity has placed in our midst a beautiful work of art, but more than this: a figure whose every outline speaks of the spirit of prayer and of confidence in the help of God. The Maid of Orleans seems to be ever saying in our presence: I have lifted up my eyes to the mountains, from whence help shall come to me. My help is from the Lord, who made heaven and earth. What I have to say shall be expressed in as few words as possible; for although the life of the Blessed Joan of Arc extended over only nineteen years and five months, the amount of material is very great. Let it be understood at the outset that the sources from which my details shall be drawn are no vague, legendary stories, but the authentic minutes taken down at her Trial, and the sworn depositions of a large number of witnesses at the Rehabilitation about twenty years after...
