Scientific medicine is developing so rapidly that of necessity it is reducing the number of the medical profession in proportion to the people they have to care for. Medicine, therefore, is becoming more wholesale and institutional, less retail and domiciliary. That of necessity has placed an enormous responsibility upon the hospital, because the hospitals must be the institutions in which the wholesale or group medicine is practised. The American College of Surgeons is responsible for the standardization of hospitals, because in its early days it found it necessary to standardize its own environments. For instance, in making a standard for admission to fellowship, it was necessary that we ask the candidates to furnish us the reports of fifty major operations and fifty minor operations, in lieu of an examination. These reports began to come in. They were on all kinds of forms. There was absolutely no standard record on which they could give us the evidence of their own ability to practise surgery. Soon we were asked from every direction to furnish a standardized system of records, to suggest a form upon which these records could be given to the College. We attempted to do that. A committee was formed for the purpose, and we furnished, wherever required, a set of standardized records. Then what happened? The hospitals a great many of...
